JANEANE GAROFALO

"I guess I just prefer to see the dark side of things.
The glass is always half empty. And cracked.
And I just cut my lip on it. And chipped a tooth"

Janeane Garofalo

Since rocketing onto the scene as the caustic voice of Gen-X in 1992, Janeane Garofalo has become an American institution. As an actor, stand-up comic, political commentator, writer and radio/TV host, she is a lightning rod for controversy, her well-informed opinions and unflinching honesty inspiring more than just huge laughs – they also strike a chord with the left, right and everyone in-between.

Janeane has appeared in over 50 movies and dozens of TV shows, including the latest season of 24. She is also a feminist, atheist, peace activist and one of the foremost political comics working in the US today.
